Walkabout Programme (open to public)

Sasol wax art award Walkabout and Workshop programme

Walkabouts:

This programme offers guided tours of the Sasol wax art award finalists' exhibition.

The tours are hosted by the curatorial team who put the exhibition together, as well as a team of trained arts facilitators.

The Sasol wax art award finalists and winner are also hosting selected tours. This programme allows the public and educational institutions to engage with the artworks and learn more about how they were made, and what the artist are communicating in their works.

Workshops:

This programme partners the Sasol wax art award finalists with people in various wax based industries by picking up on themes explored in their works. Each of the finalists of the Award had to use wax as a part of the conceptual and technical process of making their work. They have applied this in diverse ways, such as Wayne Barker's work which used bees as an active partner in the creation of the work local and Sue Williamson, who has explored the "secret" life of the inner city beauty shop. In this workshop series, the artists will discuss they approached their artwork production process, and the industry partner will engage in demonstrations and Q & A sessions about their industry. Partners include well known beauty brand, Jabu Stone, batik (a wax based process) clothing manufacturer Vlisco as well as local bee keeper Anthon Shule
